AutoCAD is a DWG application: it always wants to save there. If doing this is not any help: `OPTIONS` from the Command line `Open` and `Save` tab. `File Save` and select `DXF` of your preferred version. Then you need to create a lisp and use it only to save and close DXF files (`defun c:2013dxf (command "_saveas" "dxf" "version" "2013" "16" "" "yes")`)

I'm using AutoCAD 2018 and have it set to save to 2013 dwg format. Even if I've just saved a drawing, it will ask if I want to save when I close the dwg. If I am saving to 2018 format this does not happen. I like to run in 2013 save mode for ease in sharing drawings with clients on other versions. I know I can use etransmit to convert the drawings for sending but ...

Hi, you can only define one default save format, and for AutoCAD 2018 that should be "AutoCAD 2018 Drawing (*.dwg)" (to be defined in _OPTIONS ==> tab "Open and Save"). If you want to have a DXF save to 2013 option you can create your own menu button or lisp command like
